

International Workshop Moscow 9-16 July

Looking for Russian Architecture / Design
Students and Professionals!!!

International Workshop Moscow 9 – 16 July 2009

Future Faculty presents 'Post Socialist Russian City Project'

Thinking (of) collectivity: micro-interventions in the Microrayon

Description

The Post-Socialist Russian City Project is a new open-end research and design project. It is a collaboration between international students and professionals with Project Russia, the International Rotterdam Architecture Biennale 2009 and the faculties of Architecture and Industrial Design from Delft University of Technology.

In The Post Socialist Russian City Project, students and professionals will collaborate to explore the Russian living environment in and around pre-fab housing blocks, called the Microrayon. Conflict and possibility within the public/collective space will be the main subject for the workshop.

Program and activities Moscow

- Explorative and observational research in the Microrayon
- Interviews with local residents and users of collective space
- Micro interventions through involving inhabitant of the Microrayon
- Developing ideas and concept designs based on exploration in the MicroRayon
- Round table discussions on collective space with experts from several disciplines
- Lectures on new approaches towards generating collective space and interaction
- Documenting process by using film and photography
- Public presentation and exhibiting work in Moscow

Participate? (Deadline 20 June !!!)

We have limited place for 10 Russian architecture / design students and professionals. To sign up for the workshop we ask you to send us one A4 containing selections from your portfolio with your name and contact information. English speaking is required! Please send the material and questions to info@futurefaculty.org

More information: russia.futurefaculty.org

FUTURE FACULTY.org

Interdisciplinary Platform for Research & Design